Fish Meal

Fish meal is a high-quality protein product derived from whole fish or fish processing by-products. It is produced through a series of processes, including cooking, pressing, drying, and grinding. The final product is a fine, dry powder rich in essential nutrients, making it an excellent feed ingredient for livestock, poultry, and aquaculture.

Fish meal is known for its high protein content (typically 60-72%) and its rich composition of essential amino acids, omega-3 fatty acids (EPA and DHA), vitamins (such as B-complex), and minerals (including calcium and phosphorus). These nutrients contribute to improved growth rates, enhanced feed conversion efficiency, and overall better health in animals.

Fishmeal is widely used in various animal feed industries, including aquaculture, poultry feed, and livestock feed.

Fish Oil

Fish oil is a natural oil extracted from the tissues of oily fish, such as sardines, anchovies, mackerel, and tuna. It is a rich source of omega-3 fatty acids, particularly EPA (eicosapentaenoic acid) and DHA (docosahexaenoic acid), which are essential nutrients for health and development.

Fish oil plays a significant role in various industries, especially in animal feed, pharmaceuticals, and health supplements. In animal nutrition, fish oil is commonly used as an additive in feed for poultry, livestock, and aquaculture to support growth, improve immunity, and enhance overall health performance. Its high content of omega-3 helps promote better feed conversion rates, reproductive health, and product quality, such as meat and eggs.

Fish oil is valued for its nutritional, functional, and economic benefits, making it a key ingredient in the global feed and health industry.
